Ein Sams zu viel

Band 8

One Sat Too Many

Wish dot emergency!

The Sat gives Mr Pocketbeer a very precious present for his birthday: a very last wish dot. But what does Mr Pocketbeer go and do with it? He makes a wish for the wrong thing, of course - namely, a Sat for his pesky neighbour, Mrs Redcabbage. And straight away, there's a second Sat sitting at their dining table! It is scarily well behaved, but it poses a huge challenge for the Pocketbeer Sat!

At last: a Sat read-aloud book by Paul Maar, written especially for younger children! Perfect preparation for the iconic Sat books and super for reading aloud!

AUTHOR

Paul Maar

Paul Maar was born on 13 December 1937 in Schweinfurt. After successfully completing grammar school with his Abitur in his pocket, he studied painting and history of art at the Stuttgart School of Art. He then spent six years teaching art. Today a freelance author and illustrator, Maar lives in Bamberg. He is married and has three grown-up children. Paul Maar writes children's and young people's books and translates children's books from English in collaboration with his wife, Nele Maar. He also writes children's plays and scripts for children's television programmes, and travels around the world for the Goethe Institute promoting children's literature. His books have received numerous prizes and been translated into many languages. Paul Maar is no less successful as a playwright. He usually dreams up the characters in his stories himself, but also illustrates other writers' works. His best-known (own) characters are without doubt the Sat (Sams), a thoroughly impudent mythical creature, Lippel the dreamer and the little kangaroo. He also writes and illustrates picture stories for magazines.
