Poor little owl! A delightful book about making hurts better.

The little owl has hurt herself. The fox comes along and blows on the bump, the mouse brings a plaster and the snake strokes the little owl's cheek. But what's the best way to make it better? A kiss from Mummy Owl, of course! With the cutest little owl in the world, this book is an absolute favourite with very young children! A charming story of kindness and empathy told in clear pictures and simple rhymes children will have great fun joining in with.

“Ow!” said the little owl.

“This bump is making me howl.”

“Sssh!” said the snake. “Don’t ssspeak.

I’ll ssstroke your little cheek.”

“I’ll give it a puff or two,”

Said the fox, and he puffed and blew.

“Of bumps I am a master,”

Said the mouse, “so try this plaster.”

“Honey’s the only cure,”

Said the bear. “Of that I’m sure.”

“Oh dear, poor child, what’s this?

A bump? Let’s give it a kiss.”

“I wish I’d seen you before.

Now it doesn’t hurt anymore.”
